GIN

Gin is a distilled alcoholic drink that gets its primary flavor from juniper berries. It originated as a medicinal liquor made by monks and alchemists across Europe during the Middle Ages. It later became a commerce item in the spirits industry. Nowadays, it's part of many basic bar drinks in establishments around the world.

VODKA

Vodka’s popularity is undeniable. This clear spirit can be distilled from just about anything, though most producers turn to grain or potatoes. While Russia and Poland made it famous, today it is distilled and consumed worldwide. Vodka’s neutral flavor make it a versatile base for cocktails or a refreshing spirit to pair with soda.

RUM

Rum lovers around the world owe a great debt to a simple plant, the sugar cane, which create two main profiles - light and dark. The Longer it has been aged, the more color and flavor it absorbs from the wood. No matter the color, most rum is still from molasses, however some brands use fresh sugar cane juice.
