

Flame Trees have been grown primarily as ornamental shade trees since at least the 17th century. This tree is indigenous to Madagascar.

The Flame Tree is also known as “flamboyant tree” and Delonix regia. However, most people call it a Christmas tree because of its flowering season, which mostly occurs between October and February.

One intriguing example of a themed menu pairing is the relationship between a Flame tree and Singleton Scotch Whisky. The flame Tree, known for its vibrant and fiery blossoms, embodies a sense of warmth and intensity that mirrors the rich character of Singleton Scotch Whisky.
