the sixth sense
Behind the scene at stillwater spa, we mix massage, light warm water, and other elements to invoke a feeling that is not directly observed, but rather subconsciously perceived by the guest. Ancient music is used to calm, light, and coordinate with the time of day, and sounds like rain and ocean waves can either soothe or intensify. Touching upon the first sense, we hone the sixth sense, if it is possible, to an even stronger, yet somehow undefined, state.
